Some cities, counties and states have a citizenry that reliably votes in favor of the winning candidate year after year. These cities, counties and states are called bellwethers. Although imperfect, they can be used to predict the outcomes of elections.

Prior to this 2020, 19 counties in the U.S voted in support of the winning presidential candidate in every election going back to 1980.

This year, the majority of voters in 18 of those 19 counties voted for Donald Trump.

Ohio is a bellwether state. The majority of its voters have supported the winning presidential candidate going back to 1960. This year, Ohio voted for Donald Trump.

It has often been said that winning Florida is the key to winning the presidential election, yet Joe Biden didn't win Ohio or Florida this year.

In 2012, Obama set an all-time record low for the number of counties won in a presidential election with 689.

Biden won only 477 counties, but supposedly had 9 million more votes.

Republicans didn't lose a House seat this year and picked up 12.

I see these reports that Durham is folding up shop and not pursuing any further investigation. My reporting conflicts with that. I am seeing extensive investigative efforts under way. I don't get a sense it is over. In fact I suspect we may see actions soon from the probe.
