My Theme: Rig For Red

2) Q has not posted since August 1st.

Q's absence was due to the fact that 8chan has been offline since August 5th and that's where Q posted.

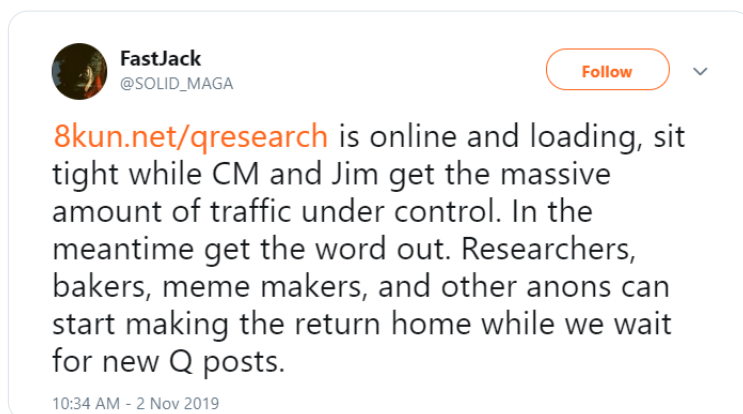

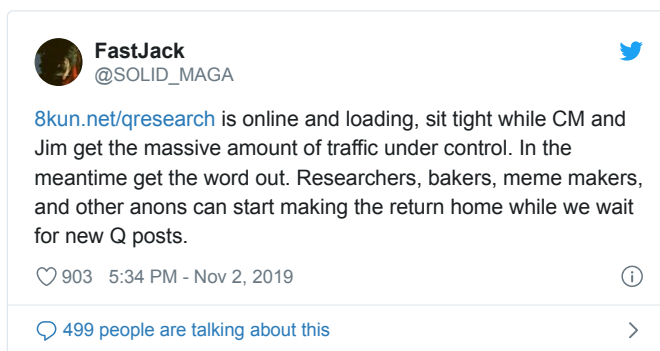

After losing their tech support from Cloudflare, the owner of 8chan, Jim Watkins and Codemonkey developed a new platform called 8kun.

3) A few hours after 8Kun went live yesterday, someone posted on the /qresearch/ board using Q's trip code.

Naturally, there is concern over how we would know for certain that someone posting on 8kun claiming to be Q is actually Q.

- 4) I'm reasonably confident that the person who posted on 8kun yesterday is Q because of the trip code they used.
- 5) A trip code is kind of password. It can secure an online identity and it can identify an individual user. Because it's a hashed password, it keeps the user anonymous.
- 6) Because the new 8kun website is, in fact, little more than a new domain to host the boards that were previously hosted on 8chan a trip code that was created on 8chan should also work on 8kun.
- 7) We were confident of Q's identity on 8chan because of his unique trip code. It seems logical that we can be confident of the identity of the person posting on 8kun using the same trip code. (Though it seems wise to evaluate certain data to increase our confidence.)
- 8) Codemonkey (CM) has been migrating boards from 8chan to 8kun after receiving permission from the board owners. FastJack, the board owner of /qresearch/ where Q posts, gave permission for the board to be migrated.

- 9) Many people have been unable to find the /qresearch/ board on 8kun. The board is not listed in the directory. It's there, but you need to know how to find it. (If you're an anon, you likely won't have problems finding it).
- 10) I'm assuming that /qresearch/ is being hidden for a reason so I won't provide a link to the clear net location though I can provide one for the Tor site (below)
- 11) The regular web version of 8kun has been hard to access though normal browsers, mostly due to massive traffic load. If you use the Tor browser, it's a piece of cake, though you cannot post (right now) from Tor. It's read-only.

Here's the Tor link: <http://jthnx5wyvjzxsxtu.onion/qresearch/index.html>

12) If you have not used 8kun previously, there's probably no reason for you to access 8kun now. Q's posts are being displayed on most of the usual websites and mobile apps and the additional traffic to 8kun is making it difficult for anyone to reach the website.

13) If you're tech savvy and want further info on options for viewing and posting on 8kun, check out @CodeMonkeyZ's page. He has all the latest information.

14) Q's private board /patriotsfight/ has not been migrated to 8kun yet because Ron (Codemonkey) has not yet received permission from Q to do it. He plans to ask Q, publicly, (on the research board) if he wants /PF/ migrated.

We are working on the issue with many people are sharing the same posting ID. Also, for everybody asking why /patriotsfight/ wasnt migrated, its simply because the board owner never emailed to ask for it to be migrated. In this case, I could make an exception and migrate it at the request of the board owner if he requests it publicly on this board. Please be patient as we fix bugs and networking connectivity issues. It might take us a couple days to be fully stable again.

15) In the above post, Ron mentioned they are working to fix a number of bugs in the system including a glitch that assigns the same user ID to multiple users. (This problem does not affect the use of trip codes).

16) Yesterday, an anon posted this test message on 8kun/Qresearch.

I suspect this may have been Q's first post on the new board and that he posted before he was logged in using his trip code.

17) I say that because 12 minutes later, a nearly identical post was made by someone using Q's trip code. The only difference is that this message ends with the number 2 instead of the number 1.

19) The next post (20 minutes later) was another test but this one had more detailed information than the previous one.

It's worth noting that ever time Q posts for the first time on a new board, he conducts a series of tests.

20) Yesterday's test had similarities to a previous post from Q.

This kind of information can be helpful when evaluating whether the person posting with Q's trip code is actually Q.

26) This post (a YouTube link) appeared on the board and then it was deleted.

I don't know why it was deleted or who deleted it but it was posted using Q's trip code.

(Posts by Q have appeared before on both the research board and patriots fight which have been deleted.)

30) In the post that was referenced above, Q trolled former FBI director James Comey.

31) The second tweet was from @SayWhenLA who noted that US Attorney John Durham (who is investigating the Spygate conspirators) served as interim US Attorney since October 28th, 2017, the first day Q posted.

2017, after Sessions appointed him. Coincidentally the same day 'Q' began posting. PresTrump nominated Durham as U.S. Atty on Nov 1, 2017. Fuck me, it's happening.

32) In the last post, Q wrote "Rig for Red" which is a command to turn on a submarine's red lights when it is about to surface at night. (The red light allows for operations to continue while preserving night vision.)

"Rig for Red" is normally a command used in the Control Room. It is normally used when the boat is going to be surfacing or coming to Periscope Depth at night. The purpose is to give the lookouts and the officer designated to head to the bridge upon surfacing a chance for their eyes to adjust to darkness, or the OOD the same thing before looking through the Periscope. However, with the change to Blue, often times Red glasses are also used to provide the same effect and then Control is changed when the command is given to surface or come to PD.

During Battle Stations and at night, many spaces are rigged for red in order to simulate night conditions. While submerged underwater during normal operations, the only real reference for the time of day is the meal being served, since most boats operate on an 18 hour rotation and not a 24 hour rotation (6 hours on watch, 12 off). The red/dark conditions are more so people can sleep rather than to simulate night. Underway, the sleeping areas are always dark unless it's a cleanup day, a drill is going on, or Battle Stations has been sounded.

The term "Rig for Red" is actually an older term, since most submarines today use broadband blue lighting for night operations. (Many spaces on older boats still have red lighting).

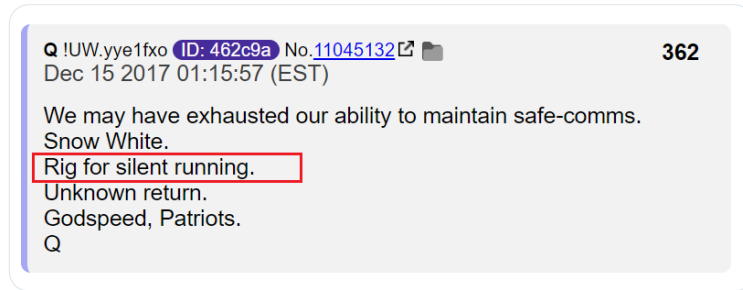

33) Many scenes in the film "The Hunt For Red October" were filmed in red light.

34) Why is this relevant?

In December of 2017, after the CI-A (Snow White) compromised the /CBTS/ board making it impossible to post securely, Q wrote, "Rig for silent running" a term submariners use for silent operations. Q notified us he would stop posting, temporarily.

35) On January 6th, of 2018, after the 8chan /pol/ board had been compromised, Q indicated he would no longer post there.

(Some may think operational security is a joke, but Q takes it very seriously.)

36) The phrase "Rig for Red" speaks of resurfacing or re-emergence after a period of silent operations. I believe that once Q is satisfied that he can post securely on 8kun, normal operations will resume.
