I suspect this thread is being highlighted again to bring more "sunlight" to the matter.

Revealing that relationship would have likely gone a long way to explain Page’s Russia contacts. IG Horowitz found dossier “played a central + essential role” in FBI decision to surveil Page. At what level + who made call to blow through these warnings? RE-READ Horowitz Xi+ Vi.

6) Q posted a link to a thread by @Techno_Fog that explains the role Jennifer Boone played in facilitating the surveillance of Carter Page.

7) Despite being involved in the illegal surveillance of Carter Page, Jennifer Boone was promoted by Chris Wray to head the Baltimore field office.

8) Boone was warned of red flags about having an FBI agent meet with Bruce Ohr. The concern was Ohr's connections to Christopher Steele

Boone directed the FBI agent to meet with Ohr anyway.

Boone was informed of serious concerns about Ohr's connections. That the contact of a closed source (Steele through Ohr) was "out of the norm."

9) It's not like Boone can claim ignorance. She supervised the team tasked with determining the sources of information contained in Christopher Steele's dossier.

This becomes more noteworthy now because Boone supervised the team who determined the dossier "sources."

This includes the newly released (and disastrous) interviews of the Steele primary sub-source that undermined the FISA warrants.

The most likely reason to insert plants would be to obtain information through their association with other people in the campaign.

As of today, Q is still suggesting that spies were inserted into Donald Trump's 2016 campaign.

28) An anon noted that General Flynn's Twitter page had changed (presumably to upload a new banner) at 11:42 pm eastern today.

29) Q responded.

30) Will General Flynn be named Chris Wray's replacement?

(Just spitballing. I have no inside information.)

In any other world, I would laugh at the idea of a retired Army General being named FBI Director.

31) As far as I know, General Flynn is not an attorney and he has no law enforcement background. On the face of it, appointing a career Army officer into an administrative law enforcement position doesn't make sense.

32) But when I consider the duties of an FBI Director, and the duties of the Director of the Defense Intelligence Agency—the position Flynn held until 2014—it begins to make sense.

33) The FBI Director is primarily a personnel manager. While they could get involved in investigations, they're mostly there to lead the bureau's agents, inspire them, oversee budgeting, training, equipment acquisition, develop policies and perform other administrative functions.

34) Those tasks do not require a law enforcement background. They do require experience in personnel management. And as the former head of the DIA, I would expect General Flynn to have the administrative experience needed to perform those tasks.

35) Consider the fact that both the DIA and the FBI are intelligence agencies. In that regard, Flynn's experience as Director of DIA would give him an advantage over other applicants who might only have experience as federal prosecutors or private law practice.

36) The fact that Q publicly named Chris Wray as a deep state asset last night and at the same time, asked General Flynn if he was ready to serve again makes me think that perhaps their mention on the same night was intended to create a future-proves-past connection.

37) Consider the fact the FBI has been plagued for years by abuse of the FISA process. One of their innocent victims was General Flynn. How do you think he'd manage the bureau's FISA program if he became FBI Director?

38) Consider this:

In March of 2018, Q said that General Flynn would be cleared of all charges and that he would re-join the Trump administration in its second version (v2)

39) The term (v2) appeared in 3 posts yesterday.

(The most recent mention was last November.)

The recent mentions of v2 make me think we're nearing the time when the Trump administration "version 2" will be launched.
