Co-Founder, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer

James Reynolds Jr. (Jim) co-founded Loop Capital Markets, LLC in 1997 with the objective, as he puts it, "not to reinvent the business but to bring a new level of sensitivity to what each individual client needs."

Mr. Reynolds, who is responsible for all investment banking, trading and institutional sales activity at the firm, has worked in the financial services industry for more than 21 years. Early in his career he served as Assistant Vice President at Smith Barney in municipal sales where he sold tax-exempt securities to a broad base of institutional investors. He also led sales in the Corporate and Institutional Client Group at Merrill Lynch where he managed the municipal sales team responsible for the distribution of all tax-exempt products to institutions in the Midwest. In addition, he established and headed the Midwest Municipal Bond Sales desk at PaineWebber in Chicago.

In 1997, Mr. Reynolds collaborated with Albert Grace to form Loop Capital Markets, LLC. Since its inception he has been dedicated to establishing a standard of uncompromising excellence in service and execution, and to creating a team comprised of only the highest quality professionals.

Beyond LCM, Mr. Reynolds serves as a board member of: The Lincoln Academy of Illinois, Chicago State University, University of Chicago Hospitals, University of Chicago Laboratory School, Chicago Zoological Society, Chicago Historical Society, Scholarship Chicago, and treasurer for the Chicago Urban League. He is also Immediate Past President for the Alliance of Business Leaders and Entrepreneurs, an influential organization of African-American business leaders in Chicago. In addition, he serves on the Dean's Advisory Board of Kellogg Graduate School of Management.

Mr. Reynolds holds a Masters of Management in Finance from Northwestern University's Kellogg Graduate School of Management and a Bachelor of Arts in Political Science from the University of Wisconsin, La Crosse. He received his Chartered Financial Analyst designation from the AIMR in 1991, and holds series 3, 7, 24, 53 and 63 licenses.

5) The next day, Jan 7. Q informed us that US taxpayers are paying for the deep state's activities via slush funds that take our money and funnel it into their accounts.

In order to do that without being detected, the money must go through financial institutions, secretly.

6) Politicians are sometimes paid for political favors.

Because bribery is illegal, money is paid to them via charities and foundations. They receive honorariums for being on the board of directors for various non-profits.

7) Receiving an honorarium for being on a board of directors isn't technically taking a bribe, but the effect can be the same.

A politician receives money and in exchange, they arrange political favors.

(This is at the heart of the DOJ's Clinton Foundation investigation.)

8) On January 13, 2018, Q named specific people who he says have engaged in pay-for-play via the method described above. (Obama, Hillary and Bill Clinton, John McCain [we don't say his name] and Nancy Pelosi).

On January 31, 2014, the Barack Obama Foundation was established to oversee planning for President Obama's future presidential library. On March 20, the Foundation released a Request for Qualifications (RFQ) to solicit responses from institutions or other parties interested in hosting the library. On June 16, the University of Chicago submitted a response to the RFQ in collaboration with organizations and civic leaders on the South Side and across Chicago. On September 15, the Foundation announced that the University of Chicago's collaborative effort has been selected for the next round in the foundation's site selection process and issued a Request for Proposal (RFP). On December 11, the University of Chicago submitted a collaborative response to the RFP. The Barack Obama Foundation has indicated that it will announce the selection of a proposal in early 2015. 12) Two days after Barack Obama was elected President, NBC published this article noting that much of Obama's success was owed to a core group of black executives including Valerie Jarrett, John Rodgers and Jim Reynolds of Loop Capital.

Although much of Obama's success can be attributed to his vision, personal skills, and leadership appeal, no small amount of credit goes to a powerful circle of black business leaders in Chicago. In addition to Logan, they include Valerie Jarrett, CEO of real estate management firm The Habitat Co. and now co-head of Obama's transition team; Jim Reynolds, CEO of investment bank Loop Capital Markets; John Rogers, CEO of mutual fund icon Ariel Investments; Quintin Primo III, CEO of commercial real estate development company Capri Capital Partners; and Frank Clark, CEO of electrical utility Commonwealth Edison.

These black executives have maintained a low profile since early February 2007, when Obama launched his presidential quest. But they have been Obama's link to well-heeled Chicagoans such as Penny S. Pritzker and James S. Crown. And contrary to widespread statistics showing blacks lagging other groups in wealth, together they have donated some $30,000 to Obama over the past two years.

Celebrating with High-Fives

Just as important, Logan and the others served as a kind of stealth sounding board long before Obama had a glimmer of an idea about the White House. They gathered for a private meeting in late 2002 as he was mulling his run for the U.S. Senate. In a tony high-rise overlooking Lake Michigan near the South Side, the then-largely anonymous state senator vetted his lofty political ambitions with some of his closest friends.

13) This article examines Chicago based investment firms like Loop Capital and how they help fund Obama's state and US Senate campaigns and then his bid for the White House.

Loyal Network Backs Obama After His Help

John W. Rogers Jr., the chief executive of Ariel Capital Management.
Steve Kagan for The New York Times

And after Mr. Jones became the State Senate president in 2003, he assigned Mr. Obama to a committee looking into the pension questions to help raise his political profile.

During this period, campaign finance records show, executives from Ariel, Loop and two other leading Chicago investment firms, Holland Capital Management and Capri Capital, sharply increased their donations to Mr. Obama's State Senate campaign fund. And once he began his campaign for the United States Senate, they quickly became a fund-raising core that has carried over into the presidential race.

Mr. Rogers, who is one of three people at his company who have each bundled at least $50,000 in donations for Mr. Obama's presidential campaign, said that his financial support for the senator had "no connection" to his company's efforts to win state contracts, but that it reflected the broader excitement over what Mr. Obama's success meant for blacks in America.

14) This 2012 article is about Obama's scheme to convince Illinois pension fund managers to invest with minority-owned firms like Reynold's Loop Capital and Rodger's Ariel Capital.

15) An interesting article comparing John McCain and Obama and their promises to reform lobbying practices while both were associating with firms caught in corrupt practices.

Loop Capital CEO Reynolds was caught on an FBI wire arranging a sham contract.

Democrat Barack Obama and Republican John McCain have made government ethics a centerpiece of their campaigns, and each has sought to distance himself from Washington's influence business.

Yet Obama and McCain have relied on key fundraisers whose names surfaced in separate federal corruption cases relating to lobbying for government contracts.

In 2003, James Reynolds, a Chicago investment banker who is a member of Obama's national finance committee, was recorded on FBI wiretaps arranging what prosecutors said was a "sham" consulting contract with a woman they called the "paramour" of a mayoral adviser in Philadelphia. His firm later won $300,000 worth of city contracts.

In 2004, Fred Malek, a co-chairman of McCain's fundraising committee, and his investment firm, Thayer Capital Partners, were censured by the Securities and Exchange Commission for not disclosing payments to a friend of former Connecticut treasurer Paul Silvester.

Silvester, who pleaded guilty in 1999 to racketeering charges, admitted in his plea agreement that he persuaded Malek and his company to pay a "finder's fee" on a state investment to the friend, who didn't do any work.

16) In October of 2017, Loop Capital arranged a settlement with the Securities and Exchange Commission over its failure to preserve emails.

17) Michelle Obama's older brother Craig Robinson has coached several college basketball teams and is currently a Vice President with the New York Knicks. But in the 1990s he worked for a number of financial firms including Loop Capital. https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Craig_Robinson_\(basketball\))

Business career, marriage and family [edit]

Robinson left basketball partly on the advice of his Princeton coach Pete Carril^[4] and pursued a business degree, earning an M.B.A. in Finance from the University of Chicago Graduate School of Business in 1992.^[5] Robinson worked in the 1990s as a bond trader. He became a vice president at Continental Bank and worked there from 1990 to 1992.^{[6][9]} He was then a vice president, from 1992 to 1999, at Morgan Stanley Dean Witter.^[4] Later, he was a managing director and partner at Loop Capital Markets, a minority-owned boutique investment banking firm.^{[4][9]}

When Robinson's sister, Michelle, began dating her law firm colleague, Barack Obama, who played basketball recreationally, she asked her brother to play with Obama and give her a character assessment so that she would know whether she could become serious with him.^{[10][11]} He gave an encouraging report to her.^{[9][12]} As he later related, "When I played basketball with Barack, he was quietly confident, which means he had good self-esteem without being cocky. He was certainly a team player – he wasn't a pig, he passed when he was supposed to pass, and he cut when he was supposed to cut. To me, that speaks to a lack of selfishness. He had natural leadership ability, because he didn't just pass me the ball because he was dating my sister. Whenever a player gets tired, he reverts to the player he truly is. That's how you tell. And we played for hours. That's how I could tell."^[10] The story of this pick-up game and of a "test" being passed became a key part of the Obama narrative.^[11]

Walter Annenberg was one of the most prominent American philanthropists of the last century. He operated several media outlets and donated billions to education reform and other social causes.

Walter Annenberg

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia
(Redirected from Walter H. Annenberg)

Walter Hubert Annenberg (March 13, 1908 – October 1, 2002) was an American businessman, investor, philanthropist, and diplomat. Annenberg owned and operated Triangle Publications, which included ownership of The Philadelphia Inquirer, TV Guide, the Daily Racing Form and Seventeen magazine. He was appointed by President Richard Nixon as United States Ambassador to the United Kingdom, where he served from 1969 to 1974.

Annenberg was born in Milwaukee and raised in New York. He attended the Wharton School, the business school at the University of Pennsylvania, though he dropped out to pursue stock investing. His father, Moses Annenberg, was convicted of tax evasion and incarcerated for two years. During that time, and following his father's death in 1942, Annenberg took control of the Inquirer, expanding its influence and his own. He built up his family's magazine business with great success, extending it into parts of the media industry such as radio and television.

During his tenure as U.S. Ambassador to the United Kingdom, he developed a close friendship with Queen Elizabeth II and other members of the Royal family. After initial perceived missteps, he came to be admired for his dedicated work ethic, his wife's lavish entertaining, and personal gifts to support patriotic British causes, such as the restoration of St. Paul's Cathedral in London. He also paid for the renovation of Winfield House, the American ambassador's residence.

In his later years, Annenberg became one of the most prominent philanthropists in the United States. He established the Annenberg Foundation in 1988 and personally gave over $2 billion to educational establishments and art galleries, including both the Annenberg School for Communication at the University of Pennsylvania and USC Annenberg School for Communication and Journalism in Los Angeles. At Sunnyslans, his 220-acre estate near Palm Springs, California, he entertained royalty, presidents and other celebrities; it is now a museum and retreat center dedicated to furthering the Annenbergs' legacies.

20) The Chicago Annenberg Challenge was a project partially funded by the Annenberg Foundation and was aimed at reforming education in Chicago public schools.

Chicago Annenberg Challenge

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

The Chicago Annenberg Challenge (CAC) was a Chicago public school reform project from 1995 to 2001 that worked with half of Chicago's public schools and was funded by a $49.2 million, 2-to-1 matching challenge grant over five years from the Annenberg Foundation. The grant was contingent on being matched by $49.2 million in private donations and $49.2 million in public money. The Chicago Annenberg Challenge was one of 18 locally designed Annenberg Challenge project sites that received $387 million over five years as part of Walter Annenberg's gift of $500 million over five years to support public school reform. The Chicago Annenberg Challenge helped create a successor organization, the Chicago Public Education Fund (CPEF), committing $2 million in June 1998 as the first donor to Chicago's first community foundation for education.

21) Who do you think was one of the authors of the winning proposal for the Chicago Annenberg Challenge?

William Ayers.

Beginnings [edit]

The three co-authors of Chicago's winning Annenberg Challenge $49.2 million grant proposal were:^{[17][18]}

- William Ayers, associate professor of education at the University of Illinois at Chicago; co-director of the Small Schools Workshop; co-director of the Chicago Forum for School Change—an affiliate of the Coalition of Essential Schools;^[19] chairman of the Alliance for Better Chicago Schools (ABCs) coalition;^{[20][21]} former Chicago assistant deputy mayor for education (1989–1990);^[21] brother of John Ayers, executive director (1994–2004) of Leadership for Quality Education (an affiliate of the Civic Committee of the Commercial Club of Chicago) and former associate director (1987–1994) of the Civic Committee of the Commercial Club of Chicago; son of Thomas Ayers, former president (1964–1980), chairman and CEO (1973–1980) of Commonwealth Edison and former vice president (1980) of the Chicago School Board
- Anne Hallett, executive director and founder of the Cross-City Campaign for Urban School Reform; former executive director of the Wieboldt Foundation (1986–1993); former executive director of the Citizens Education Center in Seattle (1983–1986); former executive director and founder of the Chicago Panel on School Policy (1982–1983); former chair, founder, and chief lobbyist for Citizens for Fair School Funding in Seattle (1976–1982)^{[20][22][23][24][25][26]}
- Warren Chapman, senior program officer for education at the Joyce Foundation; former state coordinator at the Illinois State Board of Education for the Illinois Alliance of Essential Schools—a regional center of the Coalition of Essential Schools (1986–1992)^{[27][28]}

On December 17, 1993, Ayers, Hallett and Chapman met to discuss how to win an Annenberg Challenge grant for Chicago. Hallett and Chapman were already informal pro bono advisors to the national Annenberg Challenge, and over the course of the following year they met repeatedly at Brown University with other Annenberg advisors and worked to ensure that Chicago would be one of the first cities selected to receive a grant.^[18]

In Chicago, Ayers, Hallett and Chapman gathered a 73-member Chicago School Reform Collaborative Working Group from organizations involved in school reform to help them draft a proposal, with Hallett's Cross-City Campaign for Urban School Reform donating its headquarters and providing staff support to the Working Group.^[18] In June 1994, Ayers and Hallett submitted a draft proposal to Gregorian on behalf of the Working Group.^[29]

The presidents of the three largest independent foundations active in Chicago school reform:^{[18][25]}

- Adele Smith Simmons, president of the John D. and Catherine T. MacArthur Foundation (1989–1999); vice chair and senior executive of Chicago Metropolis 2020—a project of the Commercial Club of Chicago (1999–); senior associate at the Center for International Studies at the University of Chicago (1999–2005); former president of Hampshire College (1977–1989); former assistant professor of East African history at Princeton University (1972–1977) and Tufts University (1969–1972); former dean of students at Princeton

22) Ayers an avowed communist, was a co-founder of the Weather Underground. and was an embarrassing association for Obama during his presidential campaign.

Bill Ayers

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

For the American baseball pitcher, see Bill Ayers (baseball). For the Catholic priest, radio host, and hunger activist, see Bill Ayres.

William Charles Ayers (/ˈɑːrz/; born December 26, 1944)^[1] is a former leader of the Weather Underground^[2] and American elementary education theorist. During the 1960s, Ayers' ideology was integral in the counterculture movement that opposed US involvement in the Vietnam War. He is known for his 1960s radical activism and his current work in education reform, curriculum and instruction. In 1969, Ayers co-founded the Weather Underground, a self-described Communist revolutionary group with the intent to overthrow imperialism^[3] that conducted a campaign of bombing public buildings (including police stations, the US Capitol Building, and the Pentagon) during the 1960s and 1970s in response to US involvement in the Vietnam War.

Ayers is a retired professor in the College of Education at the University of Illinois at Chicago, formerly holding the titles of Distinguished Professor of Education and Senior University Scholar.^[4] During the 2008 US Presidential campaign, a controversy arose over his contacts with candidate Barack Obama. He is married to Bernardine Dohrn, who was also a leader in the Weather Underground.

The screenshot displays the 'WHO WE ARE' page of National Security Action. It features a grid of member portraits and names, organized into sections: CO-CHAIRS, ADVISORY COUNCIL, and a main grid of members. Each member's name and title are listed below their portrait. The text below the grid reads: 'We are Americans—former senior officials and policy experts, academics and civil society leaders—who have seen first-hand how the United States is stronger, safer and more respected in the world when we stand strong with our allies, pursue principled diplomacy, and stay true to the values that have long defined America at home and abroad.'

27) An anon thought they were members of the shadow government.

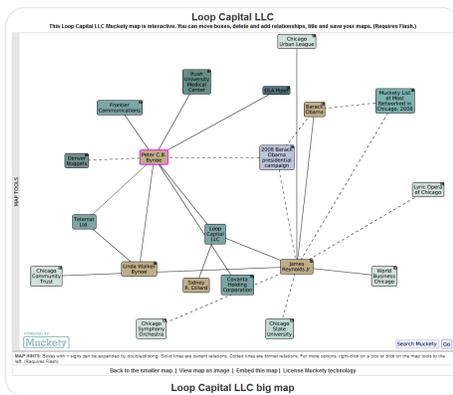

Q confirmed.

28) Q responded to his original post, it seems, connecting them to Loop Capital.

29) Yesterday, @Incarnated_ET got a shoutout from Q for digging up another Loop Capital connection.
