The reason why it calls itself the only true super HDTV antenna is due to its proclaimed 65 mile range for picking up channels. It also touts that consumers will be able to access up to 100 channels.

These claims will be difficult to achieve in every household. With hdtv antennas there are so many variables that come into play that hinder its performance. Most of these antennas are only capable of picking up around 30 local channels. You will however be saving hundreds of dollars each year by not being a cable TV subscriber.

As you continue reading this CutCordsNow HDTV antenna review you will see the various details about this product and how it compares to other brands.

How The CutCordsNow HDTV Antenna Functions

If you are familiar with the latest hdtv antennas you already know they are typically black square rectangular objects that can be hidden behind your television. Hiding the antenna behind your TV is a good place for the antenna if it's successful picking up channels.

If you're not receiving as many channels then you will definitely have to position it somewhere else in the room. The biggest concern with CutCordsNow digital antennas is positioning them in the right spot to pick up the most channels or best picture.

Installing your hdtv antenna to your TV only takes a few minutes and is very simple. It's an easy plug and play method that requires you plugging in the coaxial cable from the antenna to your television. After that you can turn on your TV and perform a channel scan to see how many channels can be accessed.

Is CutCordsNow HDTV a Scam?

Because CutCordsNow is heavily advertised online many people naturally think the device is a scam. That is not the case as it performs like any other hdtv antenna. You may not receive all 100 channels it claims but you should definitely pick up your local channels.

Expect to receive around 30 or so channels in high definition and this is without any premium cable channels such as HBO, ESPN, or Showtime. Those channels cannot be picked up by these devices.
