My Theme: Locked on Target

2) The House Intel committee interviewed 53 witnesses in its investigation of Russian election interference.

Although the committee voted unanimously to make the interview transcripts public, committee Chair Adam Schiff has refused to release them.

3) Acting Director of National Intelligence @RichardGrenell, sent a letter to Schiff letting him know his office has cleared the 53 transcripts for release.

If Schiff won't release them, Grenell will.

Now, in May 2020, they're still secret. Two weeks ago, the Wall Street Journal editorial board reported that the IC had finished its review of 43 of the transcripts, but Schiff was refusing to release them. The paper said Schiff was also preventing declassification of the remaining ten transcripts.

In the letter, Grenell revealed that the 43 transcripts have been finished since June 2019. Schiff has been sitting on them all that time. Grenell said the final ten have just been finished as well. "I urge you to honor your previous public statements, and your committee's unanimous vote on this matter, to release all 53 cleared transcripts to Members of Congress and the American public as soon as possible," Grenell said. Just in case Schiff is still not interested, Grenell added, "I am also willing to release the transcripts directly from the Office of the Director of National Intelligence, as to ensure we comply with the unanimous and bipartisan vote to release the transcripts."

One more thing. In March 2019 -- that was when Democrats were newly in charge of the House and considering impeaching President Trump over the Russia matter -- Schiff requested that the DNI "under no circumstances...share House Intelligence Committee transcripts with the White House, President Trump, or any persons associated with the White House or President." Some Republicans viewed that as a dubious request, since some of the witnesses came from the White House. Nevertheless, Grenell complied. "Pursuant to your guidance, these transcripts have not been shared with the White House," he wrote to Schiff.

4) Schiff was counting on his pal, former Director of National Intelligence Dan Coats, to keep the transcripts from being made public.

Coats was exposed as a sleeper and replaced with Grenell, who is a patriot.

A: No. Such information is protected from public disclosure, in accordance with current law and Department of Justice and FBI policy. This policy preserves the integrity of the investigation and the privacy of individuals involved in the investigation prior to any public charging for violations of the law. It also serves to protect the rights of people not yet charged with a crime.

The Spy Who Drove Her: Dianne Feinstein and Chinese Espionage

Beijing's nefarious activities in the United States are very worrying.

San Francisco is a hotbed of espionage and international intrigue. And why wouldn't it be? Strategically located near major West Coast ports, home to many large immigrant communities, and, perhaps most crucially, just up the road from America's most technologically sophisticated corporations, it makes perfect sense that America's geopolitical rivals would want to gain a foothold in the City by the Bay.

And gain it they have, evidently. Last year, when the president took the decidedly non-collusionish action of shuttering Russia's San Francisco consulate—its oldest in the country—black smoke billowed from the historic Pacific Heights building that had long housed the Kremlin outpost. Clearly, the Russians were burning evidence of misdeeds.

And we now know that China, a much more worrisome long-term threat to the United States than a declining Russia, has been active in the Bay Area as well.

Five years ago, Senator Dianne Feinstein, the California Democrat who then chaired the Intelligence Committee, was approached by the FBI. The bureau had learned that a staffer in her San Francisco office was a Chinese operative "run" out of Beijing's consulate in that city. It appears that he had started as a legitimate employee but was at some point, likely on a visit to the East, turned by a member of the Chinese Ministry of State Security.

The staffer had served the senator for some two decades as a general office lackey, a liaison to the local Chinese community, and, most important, the senator's chauffeur whenever she was in San Francisco, her hometown. Driving Ms. Feinstein would have been a plum assignment for an intelligence operative; it allowed the Chinese access to the senator's comings and goings and who she met with, as well as to any conversations she might have had in the car and any documents she may have left in it.

According to a column in the San Francisco Chronicle, the FBI did not believe the driver had managed to nab anything confidential. And after being approached by the bureau, the senator promptly fired him. It also appears that, ultimately, no charges were filed against the driver. Feinstein's press secretary ignored requests for comment on this story; her office has issued standard boilerplate to media outlets saying that the senator was "mortified" by the revelation that she had a spy on her payroll.

A 1997 Los Angeles Times article is crucial in detailing just how cozy Feinstein had become with Chinese officials at the time.

The article details how Feinstein's husband Richard C. Blum began investing in China with "one project worth less than $500,000" in 1992 before suddenly planning on investing $150 million two years later.

At the exact same moment that Blum's Chinese investment began to skyrocket, "Feinstein's role on U.S. policy toward China... expanded. In January 1995, she became a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, giving her a prominent platform for her efforts to support China's trade privileges," the Times reported.

The 1997 article also reveals that Feinstein made three visits "since 1995" to meet with senior Chinese officials, including President Jiang Zemin, bringing her husband along each time.
