qmap owner here. Not sure if Q's post about "post tracking site" refers to qmap censoring/adjusting user counts. But let me explain what happened past 2 days if it does.

ResignationAnon was claiming on twitter that he found a way to inflate qmap's user count. He created a script that could create endless sessions and he used it the other days when qmap counts jumped 200K+ rather quickly. I contacted him, did some testing, and it does look like he found a problem.

So I spent hours yesterday trying to figure out a new way to represent online counts. The old way was counting user session over the past 24 hours. The new way was to count unique user IPs in the past 30 minute (instead of 24 hours).

This has caused a lot of confusion which I am sorry about. I've decided to just remove the counters for now. Last thing I want to do is interfere with the plan!
