Sugar Defender is made up of 24 natural ingredients. They work together well. Here are eight of the main ingredients:

Eleuthero is also known as Siberian Ginseng. It has been used in traditional medicine for many years. It can keep blood sugar levels healthy by increasing insulin efficiency and reducing inflammation.

Gymnema Sylvestre is a plant native to India and parts of Africa. It has been used in Ayurvedic medicines for many years. It can control blood sugar levels by preventing the sweetness taste, which leads to people wanting less sugar.

African Mango is also known as bush mango. It grows in Africa. It's used to lose weight but also helps maintain healthy blood sugar levels and cholesterol.

Coleus forskohlii is a plant which grows in India. The extract contains forskolin which increases a chemical within the cells. Forskolin helps release stored fat in the body and aids weight loss.

The body's cells are able to respond better to insulin when they have enough chromium. A sufficient chromium consumption may help maintain stable blood sugar levels, by allowing glucose to enter cells where it can be used for energy.

Maca Root is a native plant of the Peruvian Mountains. It has been linked to increased happiness and energy. It has also shown promise in reducing fatigue and inflammation.

Guarana seeds contain natural caffeine compounds which may give you energy for the whole day, without the negative effects of caffeine. This component may improve mental alertness, concentration, and focus. It could also promote healthy blood sugar levels.

What ingredients are added to Sugar Defender?

Eleuthero - Eleuthero, also known as Siberian Ginseng, is a herb that grows in the northern China and Japan. Numerous studies have shown that eleuthero can lower insulin resistance. This is a key factor in managing type II diabetes. Eleuthero also acts as a protective measure against nerve damage, by promoting the regeneration of nerves.

Coleus: Forskolin, which is useful for a number of purposes, is found in Coleus a mint-family plant. Forskolin is most commonly used to treat asthma. However, it can also be used as a prevention against congestive cardiac failure. This substance may also help with weight loss, according to studies. It can also lower blood pressure.

Maca Root: The maca plant, native to Peru, has been valued for many years for its medicinal properties. It is widely known for this. The roots of this plant are rich in antioxidants and fight free radicals. Maca root is said to contribute to increased energy and physical endurance. Sugar Defender, a product that uses maca root as calming agent and mood booster, is a great example.

African Mango has many health benefits. It is rich in nutrients. Fruits, seeds, leaves, roots and roots--all rich in vitamin C -- have been used for medicinal purposes. This precious plant helps to boost metabolism and aids in the body's fat-burning process. The properties of mangoes help regulate blood sugar, which is another health benefit.

Guarana is a native Amazonian plant that is known for its high caffeine content. Caffeine is the main component in guarana and has been used for years to reduce blood pressure and encourage weight loss. Guarana also has the potential to reduce chronic fatigue syndrome, and improve endurance when exercising.

Gymnema - Known as a woody climbing bush, Gymnema is used for a variety of medicinal purposes. This herb is believed to inhibit the sugar receptors in taste buds. It may reduce cravings. Gymnema also helps regulate blood sugar by lowering sugar absorption in the intestines.
