FBI Files Document Communism in Valerie Jarrett's Family

Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) files obtained by Judicial Watch reveal that the dad, maternal grandpa and father-in-law of President Obama's trusted senior advisor, Valerie Jarrett, were hardcore Communists under investigation by the U.S. government.

Jarrett's dad pathologist and geneticist Dr. James Bowman, had extensive ties to Communist associations and individuals, his lengthy FBI file shows. In 1950 Bowman was in communication with a paid Soviet agent named Alfred Stern, who fled to Prague after getting charged with espionage. Bowman was also a member of a Communist-sympathizing group called the Association of Internes and Medical Students. After his discharge from the Army Medical Corps in 1955, Bowman moved to Iran to work, the FBI records show.

According to Bowman's government file the Association of Internes and Medical Students is an organization that "has long been a faithful follower of the Communist Party line" and engages in un-American activities. Bowman was born in Washington D.C. and had deep ties to Chicago, where he often collaborated with fellow Communists. JW also obtained documents on Bowman from the U.S. Office of Personnel Management (OPM) showing that the FBI was brought into investigate him for his membership in a group that "follows the communist party line." The Jarrett family Communist ties also include a business partnership between Jarrett's maternal grandpa, Robert Rochon Taylor, and Stern, the Soviet agent associated with her dad.

Jarrett's father-in-law, Vernon Jarrett, was also another big-time Chicago Communist, according to separate FBI files obtained by JW as part of a probe into the Jarrett family's Communist ties. For a period of time Vernon Jarrett appeared on the FBI's Security Index and was considered a potential Communist saboteur who was to be arrested in the event of a conflict with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (USSR). His FBI file reveals that he was assigned to write propaganda for a Communist Party front group in Chicago that would "disseminate the Communist Party line among... the middle class."

It's been well documented that Valerie Jarrett, a Chicago lawyer and longtime Obama confidant, is a liberal extremist who wields tremendous power in the White House. Faithful to her roots, she still has connections to many Communist and extremist groups, including the Muslim Brotherhood. Jarrett and her family also had strong ties to Frank Marshal Davis, a big Obama mentor and Communist Party member with an extensive FBI file.

JW has exposed Valerie Jarrett's many transgressions over the years, including her role in covering up a scandalous gun-running operation carried out by the Department of Justice (DOJ). Last fall JW obtained public records that show Jarrett was a key player in the effort to cover up that Attorney General Eric Holder lied to Congress about the Fast and Furious, a disastrous experiment in which the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco Firearms and Explosives (ATF) allowed guns from the U.S. to be smuggled into Mexico so they could eventually be traced to drug cartels. Instead, federal law enforcement officers lost track of hundreds of weapons which have been used in an unknown number of crimes, including the murder of a U.S. Border Patrol agent in Arizona.

In 2008 JW got documents linking Valerie Jarrett, who also served as co-chairman of Obama's presidential transition team, to a series of real estate scandals, including several housing projects operated by convicted felon and Obama fundraiser/friend Antoin "Tony" Rezko. According to the documents obtained from the Illinois Secretary of State, Valerie Jarrett served as a board member for several organizations that provided funding and support for Chicago slum projects operated by Rezko.

 >Coleman told us that he did not recall the briefing by Coleman reflected in his calendar.
 >We asked Comey if this briefing could have been the time in early October that he recalled being told about the connection between Midyear and the Weiner investigation. Comey stated:
 "It's possible, possible this is what is knocking around in the back of my head, but I really, see I know the frailty of memory from having done a lot of this work, at least in my memory it's much more of an informal than a meeting about it, but it's possible."

13) On page 294 of the DOJ IG report, Executive Assistant Director Randall C. Coleman's notes can be found related to an October 4th meeting he had with James Comey about the contents of Anthony Weiner's laptop.

<https://www.justice.gov/file/1071991/download>

Coleman told us that he kept regularly took notes in a journal. Coleman's notes from October 4 contained the following entry:

(1) Anthony Wiener [sic]
 (2) [Unrelated]
 (3) Wiener [sic] – texting 15 yo – Sexually Explicit
 9/26 – Federal SW – iPhone/IPAD/Laptop
 Initial analysis of laptop – thousands emails
 Hillary Clinton & Foundation
 Crime Against Children

We asked Coleman about these notes and he told us that, given their placement in his notebook, the notes would most likely represent information he was briefed on first thing in the morning by his subordinates in the Criminal Investigative Division. Coleman stated that he may have passed this information to other FBI executives after the morning briefing with the Director, but he could not remember if that occurred here.

14) When interviewed by the Inspector General, Coleman, Comey, James Baker and other FBI leaders developed a case of collective amnesia about emails and briefings related to Anthony Weiner's laptop.

But we now know Baker is testifying.

The world will know the truth.

20) Q posted a link to an article by Jon Solomon who observed that objections by FBI & DOJ over the removal of redactions from the Carter Page FISA application don't hold water.

FBI's smoking gun: Redactions protected political embarrassment, not 'national security'

John Solomon says before you judge the DOJ's and FBI's arguments for classification, consider Footnote 43.

<https://thehill.com/opinion/white-house/410287-fbis-smoking-gun-redactions-protected-political-embarrassme...>

<https://thehill.com/opinion/white-house/410287-fbis-smoking-gun-redactions-protected-political-embarrassment-not>

21) One objection is that the removal of redactions from the FISA application might open up the President to further accusations of obstruction of justice.

To declassify or not to declassify? That is the question, when it comes to the FBI's original evidence in the Russia collusion case.

The Department of Justice (DOJ) and the FBI have tried to thwart President Trump on releasing the evidence, suggesting it will harm national security, make allies less willing to cooperate, or even leave him vulnerable to accusations that he is trying to obstruct the end of the Russia probe.

Before you judge the DOJ's and FBI's arguments — which are similar to those offered to stop the release of information in other major episodes of American history, from the Bay of Pigs to 9/11 — consider Footnote 43 on Page 57 of Chapter 3 of the House Intelligence Committee's report earlier this year on Russian interference in the 2016 presidential election.

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/DpFYTAU4AIFM1n.jpg>

22) Q asked if it's true that removing redactions would further prove Trump obstructed justice, why would his enemies object?

If POTUS obstructed justice, shouldn't that be exposed?

The objection doesn't make sense.

The deep state is protecting its own interests.

THE HILL FBI's smoking gun: Redactions protected political embarrassment, not 'national security'

There is now a concrete storyline backed by irrefutable evidence: The FBI allowed itself to take political opposition research created by one party to defeat another in an election, treated it like actionable intelligence, presented it to the court as substantiated, and then used it to justify spying on an adviser for the campaign of that party's duly chosen nominee for president in the final days of a presidential election.

And when, nine months later, the FBI could not prove the allegation of collusion between Trump and Russia, unverified evidence was leaked to the media to try to sustain public support for a continued investigation.

That means the redaction of Footnote 43 had more to do with political embarrassment than with national security. And that should concern us all.

The Founding Fathers intended government to be open and transparent except when national security was at risk. They never intended national security to be used to hide old-fashioned politics.

So, Mr. President, when you weigh those DOJ/FBI arguments against declassification, please don't forget the ruse of the redaction that was Footnote 43.

The President Executive Order 13526

49) My best guess:

China's National Day celebration on October 1st is a holiday where flags are hung in public places.

(Festivities often encompass the weekends before and after Oct 1, making it a week-long celebration called "Golden Week.")

China kicks off Golden Week to celebrate National Day

People's Republic of China marked National Day celebrations today, October 1. A week-long holiday, dubbed Golden Week, follows. Record numbers of people are expected to travel.

<https://www.dailymail.co.uk/news/peoplesdaily/article-3256140/A-sea-red-flags-traffic-jams-crowded-streets-China-kicks-Golden-Week-holiday-celebrate-National-Day.html>

China's National Day celebrations marks the founding of People's Republic of China on October 1, 1949.

The national government marked the occasion with a special flag raising ceremony on Beijing's Tiananmen Square at sunrise this morning. There are also government sponsored fireworks displays planned for key cities, which will take place tonight.

Chinese flags have already been put up around the country by school and businesses as a sign of patriotism.

Officially, residents around the country are given three days holiday. However, the three days often tag onto the weekends before or after the official holidays, effectively creating a seven-day break known as Golden Week.

In a country with few holidays, many people take the opportunity to travel. It's also an important time of the year when many people who are working or studying away from home to return and see their families.

The sheer number of people trying to reach different parts of China causes chaotic scenes around the country.

With trains being the most popular mode of travel, maddening crowds have started to gather around stations from about two days ago. Long queues could be seen in and out of the stations despite the fact that many people have pre-booked seats months ago.

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 23°08′N 113°16′E﻿ / ﻿

Guangzhou (Cantonese pronunciation: [kʰɔ̌ŋ.ɿsɔ̌u], Chinese: 广州), also known as Canton,^[6] is the capital and most populous city of the province of Guangdong.^[7] Located in southern China on the Pearl River about 120 km (75 mi) north-northwest of Hong Kong and 145 km (90 mi) north of Macau, Guangzhou has a history of over 2,200 years and was a major terminus of the maritime Silk Road^[8] and continues to serve as a major port and transportation hub today, as well as one of China's three largest cities.^[9]

Guangzhou is situated at the heart of the most-populous built-up metropolitan area in mainland China, an area that extends into the neighboring cities of Foshan, Dongguan, Zhongshan and Shenzhen, forming one of the largest urban agglomerations on the planet. Administratively, the city holds sub-provincial status,^[10] and is one of China's nine National Central Cities.^[11] In 2015 the city's administrative area was estimated to have a population of 13,501,100.^[12] Guangzhou is ranked as an Alpha- Global city.^[13] In recent years, there has been a rapidly increasing number of foreign temporary residents and immigrants from Southeast Asia, the Middle East, Eastern Europe and Africa.^[14] This has led to it being dubbed the "Capital of the Third World".^{[15][16]} The domestic migrant population from other provinces of China in Guangzhou was 40 percent of the city's total population in 2008. Imagine if it emerged that the Republican chairman of the House or Senate intelligence committee had a Russian spy working on their staff. Think it would cause a political firestorm? Well, this month we learned that Sen. Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.) had a Chinese spy on her staff who worked for her for about 20 years, was listed as an "office director" on payroll records and served as her driver when she was in San Francisco, all while reporting to China's Ministry of State Security through China's San Francisco Consulate. The reaction of the mainstream media? Barely a peep.

Feinstein acknowledged the infiltration but played down its significance. "Five years ago the FBI informed me it had concerns that an administrative member of my California staff was potentially being sought out by the Chinese government to provide information," Feinstein said in a statement — which means the breach took place while Feinstein was heading the Intelligence Committee. But, Feinstein insisted, "he never had access to classified or sensitive information or legislative matters" and was immediately fired. In other words: Junior staffer, no policy role, no access to secrets, quickly fired — no big deal.

But it is a big deal. I asked several former senior intelligence and law enforcement officials how serious this breach might have been. "It's plenty serious," one former top Justice Department official told me. "Focusing on his driver function alone, in Mafia families, the boss's driver was among the most trusted men in the crew, because among other things he heard everything that was discussed in the car."

A former top CIA clandestine officer explained to me what the agency would do if it had recruited the driver of a senior official such as Feinstein. "We would have the driver record on his phone all conversations that Feinstein would have with passengers and phone calls in her car. If she left her phone, iPad or laptop in the car while she went to meetings, social events, dinners, etc., we would have the driver download all her devices.

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/DpGJB6IUcAAMmwE.jpg>

If the driver drove for her for 20 years, he would probably would have had access to her office and homes. We would have had the source put down an audio device in her office or homes if the opportunity presented itself. Depending on the take from all of what the source reported, we would use the info to target others that were close to her and exhibited some type of vulnerability."

"In short," this officer said, "we would have had a field day."

It seems improbable that Feinstein never once discussed anything sensitive in her car over a period of years. But let's assume that Feinstein was extraordinarily careful and never discussed any classified information in front of her driver or on any devices to which he had access. Even so, one former top intelligence official told me, "someone in that position could give an adversary a whole bunch on atmospherics and trends and attitudes which are from time to time far more important than the things we call secrets." He added, "It's like [having access to her] unclassified emails." (And we all know no one ever exposes classified information on unclassified emails).

Washington is understandably focused on the threat from Russia. But according to FBI Director Christopher A. Wray, "China from a counterintelligence perspective represents the broadest, most pervasive, most threatening challenge we face as a country." It was China, after all, that hacked the Office of Personnel Management in 2015, stealing the SP-86 security clearance forms of many thousands of executive-branch employees in the most devastating cyberattack in the history of our country. Beijing has successfully recruited FBI agents and State Department employees as spies, and has used information from U.S. informants to kill more than a dozen CIA sources inside the regime. And now, we know China recruited a high-value Senate staffer who worked in immediate proximity to the head of the Senate Intelligence Committee.

56) Gotta love Google's motives. >> We can't afford to miss out on an opportunity to reach a billion people with our ethically compromised product.

No surprise.

Google has always been in the business of censorship.
It's just a matter of what is being censored.

It has been two months since The Intercept first revealed details about the censored search engine, code-named Dragonfly. Since then, the project has faced a wave of criticism from human rights groups, Google employees, U.S. senators, and even Vice President Mike Pence, who on Thursday last week called on Google to “immediately end development of the Dragonfly app that will strengthen the Communist Party’s censorship and compromise the privacy of Chinese customers.”

Google has refused to answer questions or concerns about Dragonfly. On Sept. 26, a Google executive faced public questions on the censorship plan for the first time. Keith Enright told the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation Committee that there “is a Project Dragonfly,” but said “we are not close to launching a product in China.” When pressed to give specific details, Enright refused, saying that he was “not clear on the contours of what is in scope or out of scope for that project.”

Gomes’s remarks also shed light on why Google is interested in returning its search engine to China after a noisy departure in 2010, when the company announced that it “could no longer continue censoring our results” there due to concerns over free speech and security. In explaining to staff why the work on Dragonfly was “extremely important,” Gomes referenced the sheer size of the Chinese market, saying “we are talking about the next billion users” for Google. He also called China “the most interesting market in the world today.” “By virtue of working on this,” Gomes added, “you will act as a window onto this world of innovation that we are otherwise blind to.”
