Last night, Tucker Carlson said Sidney Powell made accusations about election fraud for which she has provided no evidence.

Eyewitness testimony along with a sworn statement is considered evidence in a court of law. Every significant claim Powell made yesterday was backed up with eyewitness testimony—evidence.

In the two weeks since the election, Twitter has been filled with hundreds of threads and videos showing evidence of Dominion's role in election fraud. Carlson admitted that he was aware of this in his broadcast. For a journalist to admit they have knowledge of the existence of evidence of fraud and then deny it on the air is blatantly dishonest.

Sidney Powell responded this morning:

I offered affidavits to Tucker Carlson explaining how Dominion switches votes but he was "insulting, demanding and rude and I told him not to contact me again."
