McLean, Virginia

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Coordinates: 38°56′03″N 77°10′39″W﻿ / ﻿

McLean (/məˈkleɪn/ mə-KLAYN)^[4] is a census-designated place (CDP) in Fairfax County in Northern Virginia. McLean is home to many diplomats, businessmen, members of Congress, and high-ranking government officials partially due to its proximity to Washington, D.C. and the Central Intelligence Agency. It is the location of Hickory Hill, the former home of Ethel Kennedy, the widow of Robert F. Kennedy. It is also the location of Salona, the former home of Light-Horse Harry Lee, the Revolutionary War hero. The community had an estimated total population of 53,673 in 2015, according to estimates prepared by the United States Census Bureau.^[5] It is located between the Potomac River and the town of Vienna. McLean is known for its luxury homes and its nearby high-end shopping destinations: the Tysons Corner Center and the Tysons Galleria. The two McLean zip codes - 22101 and 22102 - are among the most expensive ZIP Codes in Virginia and the United States.^[6] In 2018, data from the American Community Survey revealed that McLean was the 3rd wealthiest city in the United States, based on its poverty rate of 2.6% and its median household income of $190,258.^[7]

20) I had a dream last night about Edward Snowden and Julian Assange.

Odd that #Qanon would post about Snowden and "Project DeepDream" on the same night I had a dream about him.
Coincidence?

In the dream, Edward Snowden and Julian Assange were online, trying to straighten out issues with the way they were perceived, publicly. Snowden was the main focus of the dream. Assange only appeared occasionally.

People became aware of Snowden's dark side. He was putting out information intended to change that perception. I knew that the information he was putting out was false.

Assange was also trying to fix his public image, but the reverse was true. He was trying to knock down negative propaganda that had been used against him by giving people facts.

21) Here's one possible explanation for #Qanon's mention of Project Deep Dream.

Q is this Deep Dream reference?

Deep Dream

As with all Bourne films, the story unfolds as our protagonist is chased by the suits at Langley through a series of foreign countries. In "Jason Bourne," the latest concern is that Bourne has come into possession of internal, top-secret CIA and NSA documents, and may intend to make them public. The filmmakers are obvious in acknowledging the reference to Edward Snowden, who exploded onto the world the full extent of U.S.

intelligence gathering activities and pushed into the mind of the average citizen an understanding of unfettered data collection at a level not before imagined.

At the center of "Bourne" is a fictional company named Deep Dream, a thinly-veiled reference to both Facebook and Google that has secretly held the hands of the NSA while assuring its masses of customers that their data will be kept private. The parallel is clear to the NSA Prism program, also made public by Snowden's releases. Prism called for the collection of data from online providers including email, chat services, videos, photos, stored data, file transfers, and video conferencing, to be aggregated and accessible by the NSA. A number of America's largest internet service provider companies (Google, Facebook, Yahoo!) were named by Snowden's NSA slides as participants in the program. Media accusations claimed such participation might even include open access by the NSA to all such data at any time and without a warrant. (When asked by The New York Times for a response, several companies responded that they did not allow the government "open-ended access to their services" but noted they did comply with lawful requests.)

Several scenes in the movie offer opportunities for the filmmakers to weigh in on the debate between tech and privacy advocates. The presence of Scott Shepherd as Director of National Intelligence Edwin Russell gives a mouthpiece to the side of government, and brings to mind the 2013 testimony of James Clapper (then-U.S. Director of National Intelligence) as he defended to Congress the NSA program BOUNDLESS INFORMANT, designed to quantify the agency's daily surveillance activities with exactitude. Clapper testified that the NSA did not collect any type of data at all on millions (or hundreds of millions) of Americans. He was soon thereafter proved to have knowledge that in a 30-day period surveyed and ending in February 2013, one unit within the NSA collected more than three billion pieces of communication data from U.S. communication systems alone.

Privacy and security advocates alike will take pleasure in the scene set at a restaurant which plays out between CIA Director Robert Dewey (Tommy Lee Jones) and head of Deep Dream Aaron Kalloor (Riz Ahmed). The actors frame the ultimate debate at this table: Should we be more concerned with privacy, or with security? Jones as the archetypal bureaucrat and Kalloor as the stereotyped tech wonder kid argue each side in turn; yes, the pressing security needs of a political superpower cannot be underestimated, and data is a weapon in our protection.

Jason Bourne (film)

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Seeking answers about his past and family, Bourne locates Dassault in Berlin. Decrypting Parsons' files, Bourne discovers that his father, Richard Webb, was a CIA analyst involved in the creation of the Treadstone program. A "malware" program implanted in the files gives the CIA Bourne's location, and Dewey sends a team to capture him, while Lee remotely erases the files. Dassault attacks Bourne, but is killed. Lee alerts Bourne to the team closing in, as she believes that he can be persuaded to return to the agency. Using the few leads he gathered in Berlin, Bourne tracks Malcolm Smith, a former Treadstone surveillance operative, in London and arranges to meet him in Paddington Plaza.

Lee persuades Dewey's boss, Edwin Russell, the Director of National Intelligence, to allow her to contact Bourne in person to attempt to bring him back in. Dewey, who opposes her plan, secretly authorizes the Asset to eliminate her team and kill Bourne. Bourne evades Lee and the Asset long enough to confront Smith. Smith admits that Richard Webb created Treadstone, but tried to prevent them from recruiting his son. Under Dewey's orders, the Asset killed Richard Webb in Beirut, making it look like a terrorist attack, in order to persuade Bourne to join Treadstone. Smith is killed by the Asset, while Bourne escapes and finds Lee. She admits that she is not comfortable with Dewey's methods and directs Bourne to a technology convention in Las Vegas.

Dewey is scheduled to attend the convention for a public debate on privacy rights with Aaron Kalloor, CEO of social media giant Deep Dream. Kalloor is the public face of corporate social responsibility in the Internet age, but he was secretly funded by Dewey in the startup stage. Dewey intends to use Deep Dream for real-time mass surveillance alongside the latest incarnation of the CIA's targeted assassination 'Beta' program, known as "Iron Hand". When Kalloor has second thoughts about giving the CIA access to Deep Dream, Dewey authorizes the Asset to assassinate Kalloor and Lee. Bourne thwarts the assassinations and confronts Dewey in his suite. Dewey appeals to Bourne's sense of patriotism as he stalls for time. Bourne kills Jeffers, Dewey's right-hand man, and Lee kills Dewey before he can shoot Bourne. Bourne covers up Lee's involvement before chasing the Asset on the Las Vegas Strip and finally killing him during a brutal hand-to-hand fight.

In the aftermath, Lee convinces Russell that Dewey's methods were outdated and offers herself as Dewey's replacement as CIA director and Russell's eyes and ears within the CIA. She outlines her plan to use Bourne's trust to bring him back to the agency, but is prepared to kill him if he refuses. Lee meets with Bourne, promising him that the CIA will become the organization he thought it was when he joined. Bourne asks for time to consider her offer and walks away. Lee returns to her car and finds a recording, made by Bourne, of the conversation she had with Russell about bringing Bourne in.

I believe he's saying that Jack tasked 3 people (or groups) on Twitter to develop measures that will limit and/or delete our followers to reduce our voice on social media in an attempt to reduce the negative press against DC elites.

Attorney General Sessions Announces New Cybersecurity Task Force

Attorney General Jeff Sessions has ordered the creation of the Justice Department's Cyber-Digital Task Force, which will canvass the many ways that the Department is combatting the global cyber threat, and will also identify how federal law enforcement can more effectively accomplish its mission in this vital and evolving area.

"The Internet has given us amazing new tools that help us work, communicate, and participate in our economy, but these tools can also be exploited by criminals, terrorists, and enemy governments," Attorney General Sessions said. "At the Department of Justice,

The Task Force will be responsible for issuing a report to the Attorney General by the end of June.

The Attorney General has asked the Task Force to prioritize its study of efforts to interfere with our elections; efforts to interfere with our critical infrastructure; the use of the Internet to spread violent ideologies and to recruit followers; the mass theft of corporate, governmental, and private information; the use of technology to avoid or frustrate law enforcement; and the mass exploitation of computers and other digital devices to attack American citizens and businesses. The scope of the Task Force's report is not limited to these categories.
