

Q February 26, 2022

This update is for those interested in posts made on Truth Social by the account @q.

When Q first posted on 4chan in October of 2017, he did not sign his posts or use a tripcode. He was, for all anyone knew, just another anonymous person.

You know, I'm starting to think some of them really do believe it, sad as that is. It's hard to imagine, because they clearly don't base it on any logical chain of thought. But all the people on TV that they trust to tell them the truth keep saying with total earnestness day after day for a year that Something is absolutely true and sure to happen if they just have faith, so I guess after a while they can't question it.

Q's first post with a trip code.

As fakers and phonies took to Twitter and Facebook claiming to be Q, it became necessary to let followers know that he was not posting on those platforms. Since this post, dozens of social media personalities have claimed that they've had private conversations with Q or that they know who Q is, yet to this day, his identity remains unknown.

After the website 8chan was taken down, in November of 2019, Q returned on a new board on 8kun, but his identity had to be reverified. He gave anons a heads up that a tripcode verification was coming.

Q

It has always been Q's interactions with President Trump that gave us proof that he was working closely with him. It is not Q's tripcode and it is not the fact that he posts on a certain board that proves Q is legitimate. Q is no one if he is not verified by President Trump. And if the President and his people choose to confirm Q on another platform, it seems wise to follow their lead.

The nature of Q's mission was destined to change as we drew closer to the day of reckoning for the deep state. I have always assumed that they would fight the public disclosure of their crimes. I've also assumed that Trump's people had a plan to make that disclosure more widespread. Since Q is the route through which President Trump chose to disclose information about corruption, it's logical to think that Q's messaging would have to switch to a more publicly visible platform when Durham's indictments are unsealed. I think that time has arrived.

The timing of Durham's indictments, the launch of Truth Social, and the creation of an account on it by someone claiming to be Q seems to have as its goal, the establishment of a more robust intelligence operation that the public will find harder ignore and Silicon Valley will find harder to silence.

I don't know if we'll see confirmation from Q on the 8kun board that he is posting on Truth Social. If we do not receive confirmation there, Dan Scavino, Devin Nunes, Kash Patel and others in Trump's orbit may verify @q on Truth Social in their own way and I would argue they already are, even if Trump himself is not involved. Q's modus operandi has always been to provide circumstantial evidence to back up his claims, providing just enough proof to get us to question whether something is a coincidence, but leaving just enough doubt to provide plausible deniability for those involved.

Because the person in the photo posted by Kash Patel wore a flannel shirt, yesterday, Pepe Lives Matter suggested we should all wear flannel as a tribute to Q.

Is the account on Truth Social actually Q
Or is it just Trump's people trolling the media and Q haters?
I believe it's both.
Q has always trolled the fake news industrial complex.
And I believe he is now having fun doing it with Kash Patel, Devin Nunes and the creators of Truth Social.

In the spirit of sarcasm, someone posted a Brian Stelter meme and jokingly suggested that Stelter was Q.

Okay, the Brian Stelter part hurt...

While some people are worried that the war in Ukraine will become World War III, I follow the lead of Trump and Q. I know people are dying. The loss of life and property are real. I'm not dismissing the pain and suffering that are occurring. But Trump and Q don't seem worried about the outcome, so I'm willing to trust that it will not lead to World War III.

Alright anons - where are we tonight?

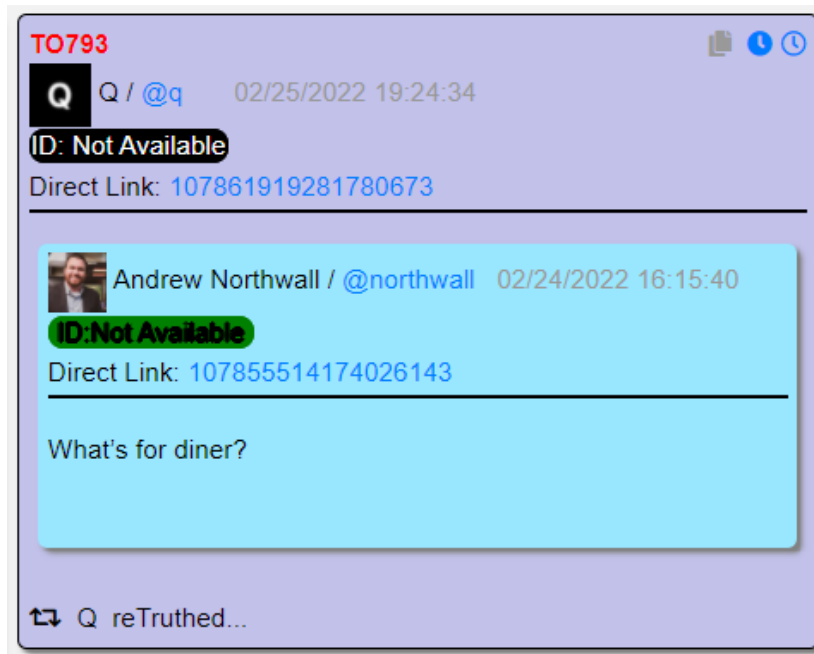

Anons determined that Q and Kash were at Del Frisco's Double Eagle Steak house in Orlando which has the unique angled wine bottle display found in the original photo.

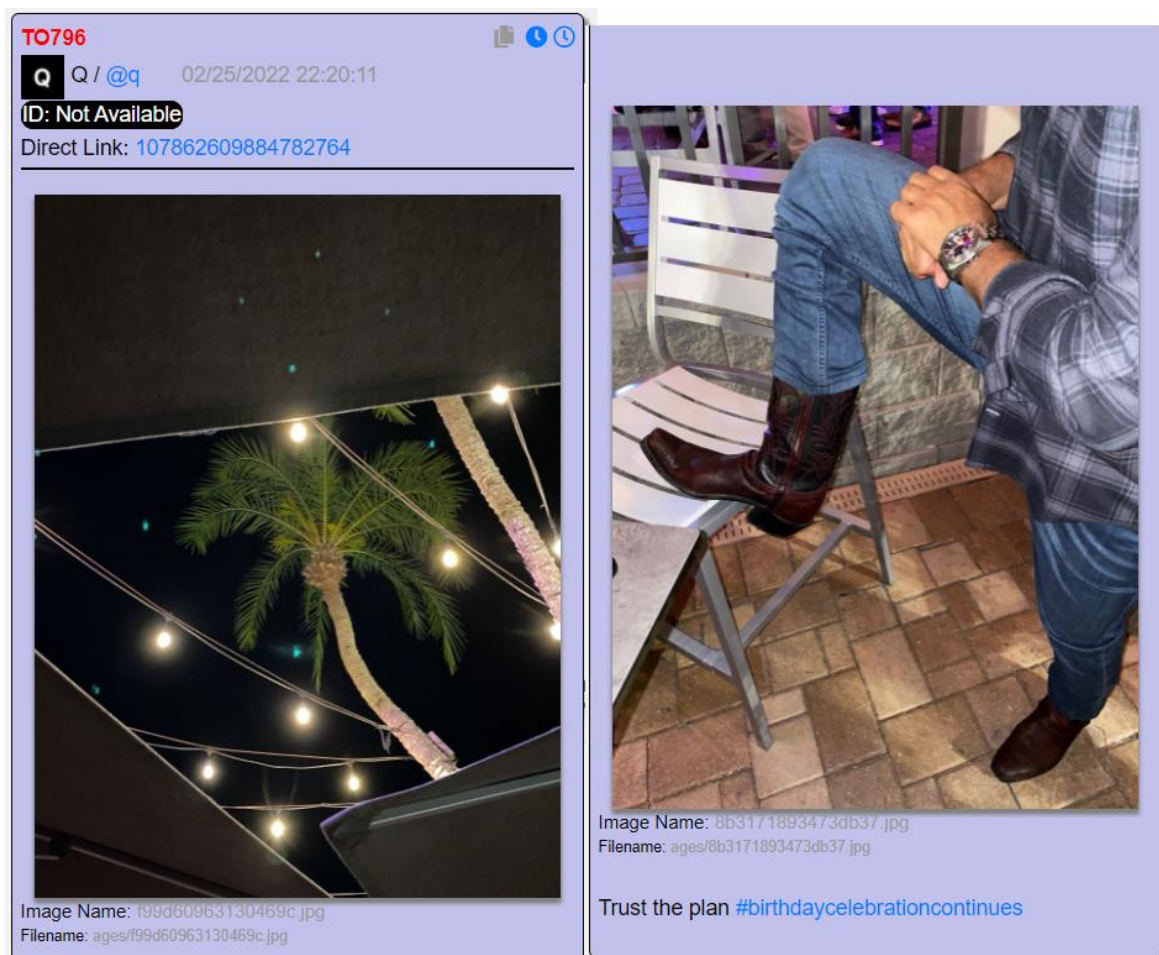

It's worth noting that there were likely more people present than just Q and Kash since many conservative leaders are in town for CPAC.

Q reposted someone who asked what's for dinner. (Yes, there was a typo, but it was not Q's typo and I don't know if it's relevant.)

Q posted two photos. One is the night sky. The other shows someone wearing a flannel shirt. Jeans and reddish-brown cowboy boots. This person could be Q or it may not be.

Some people speculated that this might be Seth Keshel, who has a penchant for wearing cowboy boots, jeans and flannel shirts.

However, Seth posted a couple of messages in the last few days noting that he is currently in Midland, Texas.

Seth Keshel - "Captain K"

I love random facts. I'm passing through Taylor County, Texas.

Figured I'd look into the origins of the name. It is named after the three brothers Taylor who died in battle at The Alamo.

Edward, George, and James.

Edward means Guardian. It's my middle name.

A photograph of a piece of white paper with handwritten text in black ink. The text reads: "26 February 2022", "Midland, TX", "I don't believe in luck. My thoughts are that while this is not necessarily the "Q" individual from the QPosts/Boards, it is still Q...

The real question is: Is there multiple people in Trump's inner circle acting as Q?

Because if so, this is still Q, just not the same person as the one who posted on the boards.

I saw @q posted a response to a comment saying essentially he isn't the Q that the Anon wanted him to be. Buuuuttt... that doesn't mean it isn't Q.

Or it's just people close to Nunes/Patel just Trolling 🤔

Take heart and pray.

If you're frustrated because of the wait to join Truth Social, please be patient.

Also, be aware that the team is working around the clock to keep this app going. Many are working with very little sleep. There's not a lot of time to check in on followers and follow back right now.

The mission is to get as many people on the platform. That's the focus of attention as well as squashing bugs and making improvements.
