My Theme: It's Time for People to Go to Jail

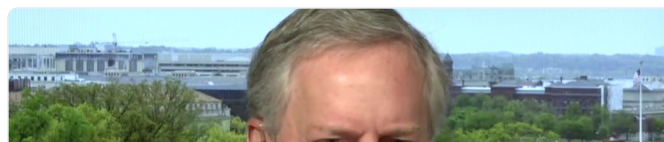

2) Q posted a link to a Fox News article.

3) This morning, Maria Bartiromo asked White House Chief of Staff Mark Meadows about indictments in the Durham investigation.

He said, "It's time for people to go to jail."

5) Q reposted a screencap from an anon.

6) FBI Director Chris Wray hired a new General Counsel to replace the outgoing Dana Boente. The new hire, Jason Jones, is a partner in a DC law firm with many connections to the swamp.

7) In July of 2019, an anon suspected Chris Wray was secretly working for the deep state as a "sleeper."

Q's response seemed to confirm his suspicion.

After deep state sympathizers are removed, version 2 (v2) of the Trump administration should run more efficiently.

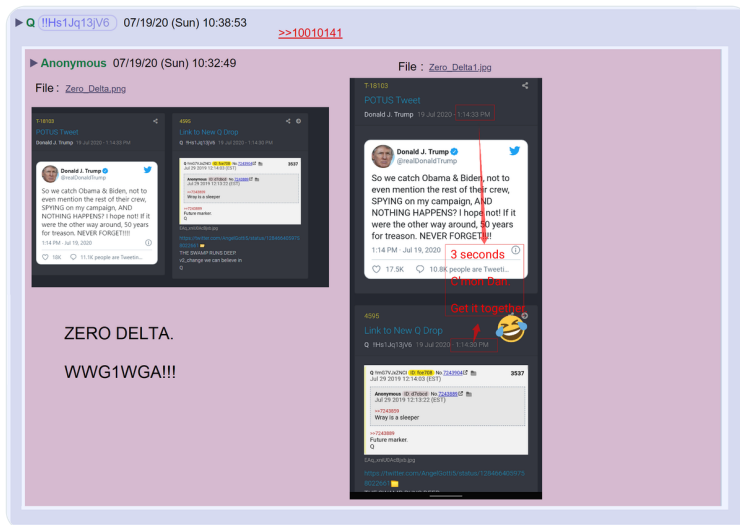

8) Three seconds after Q made the above post, the President tweeted this.

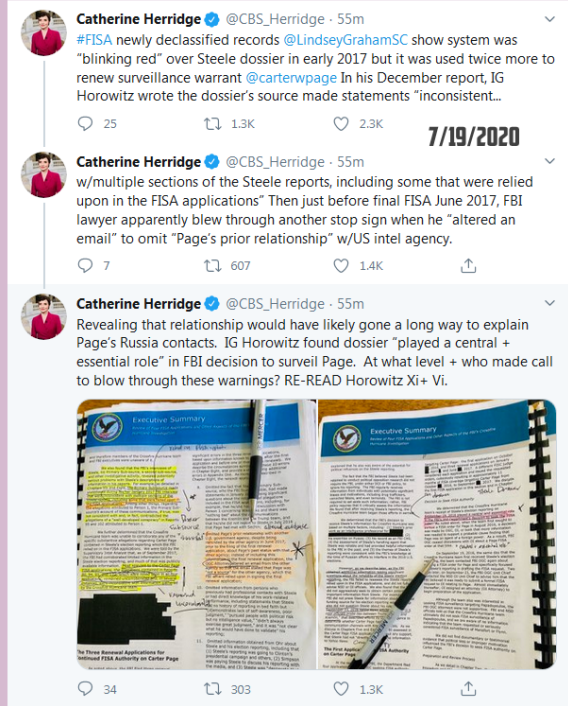

9) What are the odds that Q would post just a few seconds before POTUS?

(We believe "Dan" is Dan Scavino.)

10) An anon posted a screencap of a thread by Catherine Herridge about the FBI's surveillance of Carter Page.

Revealing that relationship would have likely gone a long way to explain Page's Russia contacts. IG Horowitz found dossier "played a central + essential role" in FBI decision to surveil Page. At what level + who made call to blow through these warnings? RE-READ Horowitz Xi+ Vi.

It seems more documents will be declassified soon.

Last August, Q suggested former DNI Dan Coats (a sleeper) had to be removed before declass would begin.

17) Something else to consider...

Herridge's pen is a "Mercer" brand.

18) Mercer happens to be the name of Mike Pompeo's dog.

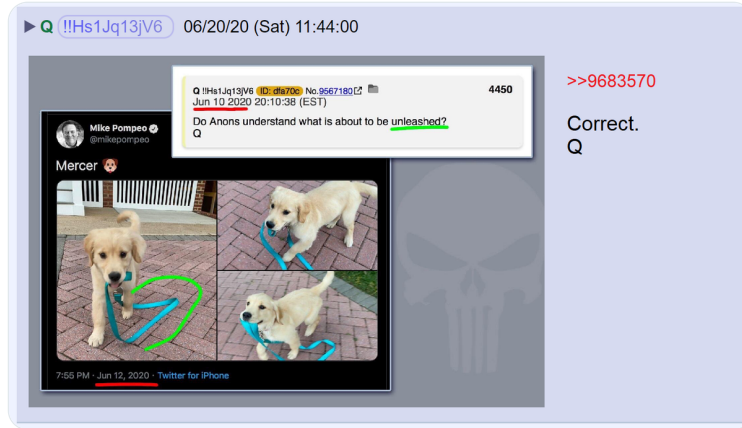

19) Some people interpreted Pompeo's post as a coded message criticizing China's President Xi.

20) Q had previously connected Pompeo's mention of Mercer to what is "about to be unleashed."

21) On August 19th, 2018, Q compared the exposure of corruption to a three-part trilogy and provided a summary of the first movie.

Today, he reposted part of that drop with the word "August."

I would infer that this part of the story will be made public in August of this year.

22) Full post from August 2018.

23) Another possible Mercer connection...

Hugh Mercer was a Scottish physician and soldier.

He became a close friend of George Washington and played an important part in the Revolutionary War, including the battle of Trenton.

The American Revolution [\[ edit \]](#)

Before the New York City Campaign, Washington ordered two forts built to repel the Royal Navy. On the New York side of the Hudson River, Fort Washington was constructed, and Mercer himself oversaw the building of the earthen fortification on the New Jersey side, named Fort Lee.<sup>[19]</sup> Though the fort was bravely defended, the British captured Fort Washington on 16 November 1776, and the Americans abandoned Fort Lee four days later. The retreat to New Jersey became known as "the Crisis of the Revolution", because the enlistments of most of Washington's soldiers ended on New Year's Day 1777.

There are rumors that Mercer exclusively originated Washington's plan to cross the Delaware River and surprise the Hessians at the Battle of Trenton on December 26, 1776, and he was certainly a major contributor to its execution. Due to the victory at Trenton (and a small monetary bonus), Washington's men agreed to a ten-day extension to their enlistment. When Washington decided to face off with Cornwallis during the Second Battle of Trenton on January 2, 1777, Mercer was given a major role in the defense of the city.<sup>[20]</sup>

The next day, January 3, Washington's army was en route to Princeton, New Jersey. While leading a vanguard of 350 soldiers, Mercer's brigade encountered two British regiments and a mounted unit. A fight broke out at an orchard grove and Mercer's horse was shot from under him. Getting to his feet, he was quickly surrounded by British troops who mistook him for George Washington and ordered him to surrender. Outnumbered, he drew his saber and began an unequal contest. He was finally beaten to the ground, then bayoneted repeatedly—seven times—and left for dead.<sup>[21]</sup>

When he learned of the British attack and saw some of Mercer's men in retreat, Washington
