Mueller indicted people close to POTUS without cause.

AG Barr pulled those indictments from DC courts.

Mueller reports to Barr.

The release of Bruce Ohr's testimony was timed to expose attempts to harm POTUS.

PELOSI, SCHUMER — Joint Statement on President Trump's New Demand for Wall Funding

MARCH 10, 2019

Washington, D.C. – Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Democratic Leader Chuck Schumer released this joint statement on reports that President Trump will request $8.6 billion for his expensive and ineffective border wall:

"President Trump hurt millions of Americans and caused widespread chaos when he recklessly shut down the government to try to get his expensive and ineffective wall, which he promised would be paid for by Mexico. Congress refused to fund his wall and he was forced to admit defeat and reopen the government. The same thing will repeat itself if he tries this again. We hope he learned his lesson.

"At a time when our country faces challenges about jobs for the future, this money would better be spent on rebuilding America, and on education and workforce development for jobs for the 21st Century."

8) Those who are screaming for POTUS to declassify FISA docs consider this:

Trump can only fire that weapon one time.

Right now, DECLAS is being used as leverage to keep [them] in check.

Expending valuable ammunition before the optimal time is foolish.

Trust the plan.

9) I don't want anyone to misunderstand my purpose for including Paul Manafort in the first graphic. Some people think Manafort was a loyal Trump supporter.

13) If a prosecutor fails to present exculpatory evidence (evidence that the suspect is innocent) to a grand jury and the grand jury issues a "true bill" (an indictment), the case should be remanded back to a grand jury to hear the exculpatory evidence.

14) If a grand jury under Mueller's supervision got an indictment against a member of the President's family on baseless charges, Mueller would be wise to take steps to prevent the case from going to trial.

Their shared contact, Joseph Mifsud, was from the London Centre of International Law Practice, where George briefly worked and which he now describes as “like, this hotbed with potential spies and all this craziness.” Mifsud was a jowly, balding academic who, according to court documents, George “understood to have substantial connections to Russian government officials.” In March 2016, Mifsud allegedly advised him that the Russian government possessed dirt on Hillary Clinton in the form of “thousands of e-mails,” information George is said to have divulged to the Australian ambassador to the U.K. at London’s Kensington Wine Rooms. Australian officials reportedly passed the news to the FBI, igniting the investigation into the Trump campaign in July 2016.

31) This September 2018 article provides background info on the relationships between FBI agent Michael Gaeta and Christopher Steele who helped the FBI with its investigation of the 2010 FIFA corruption scandal.

https://www.theepochtimes.com/how-a-little-known-fbi-unit-helped-to-disseminate-the-steele-dossier_2638330.html

Gaeta, an FBI agent and assistant legal attaché at the U.S. Embassy in Rome, has known the former spy, Christopher Steele—who authored the controversial dossier on then-candidate Donald Trump—since at least 2010, when Steele provided assistance in the FBI's investigation into the FIFA corruption scandal, over concern that Russia might have been engaging in bribery to host the 2018 World Cup.

According to Guardian journalist Luke Harding in a Nov. 15, 2017, article, Steele played a central role in establishing the investigation into the international soccer organization:

“Steele discovered that FIFA corruption was global. It was a stunning conspiracy. He took the unusual step of briefing an American contact in Rome, the head of the FBI's Eurasian serious-crime division.”

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/D1j5cUU0AEFTf6.png>

32) In 2009, Steele retired from MI6. That year he met Glen Simpson who had just quit his job at the Wall Street Journal and started up an opposition research company called Fusion GPS.

Turns out they knew a lot of the same people in the FBI

How Trump walked into Putin's web

The long read: The inside story of how a former British spy was hired to investigate Russia's influence on Trump – and uncovered explosive evidence that Moscow had been cultivating Trump for years

<https://www.theguardian.com/news/2017/nov/15/how-trump-walked-into-putins-web-luke>

<https://www.theguardian.com/news/2017/nov/15/how-trump-walked-into-putins-web-luke>

Simpson had been an illustrious Wall Street Journal correspondent. Based in Washington and Brussels, he had specialised in post-Soviet murk. He didn't speak Russian or visit the Russian Federation. This was deemed too dangerous. Instead, from outside the country, he examined the dark intersection between organised crime and the Russian state.

By 2009, Simpson decided to quit journalism, at a time when the media industry was in all sorts of financial trouble. He co-founded his own commercial research and political intelligence firm, based in Washington DC. Its name was Fusion GPS. Its website gave little away. It didn't even list an address.

Simpson then met Steele. They knew some of the same FBI people and shared expertise on Russia. Fusion and Orbis began a professional partnership. The Washington- and London-based firms worked for oligarchs litigating against other oligarchs. This might involve asset tracing - identifying large sums concealed behind layers of offshore companies.

Later that year, Steele embarked on a separate, sensitive new assignment that drew on his knowledge of covert Russian techniques - and of football. (In Moscow he had played at full-back.) The client was the English Football Association, the FA. England was bidding to host the 2018 soccer World Cup. Its main rival was Russia. There were joint bids, too, from Spain and Portugal, and the Netherlands and Belgium. His brief was to investigate the eight other bidding nations, with a particular focus on Russia. It was rumoured that the FSB had carried out a major influence operation, ahead of a vote in Zurich by the executive committee of Fifa, soccer's international governing body.

Steele discovered that Fifa corruption was global. It was a stunning conspiracy. He took the unusual step of briefing an American contact in Rome, the head of the FBI's Eurasian serious crime division. This "lit the fuse", as one friend put it, and led to a probe by US federal prosecutors. And to the arrest in 2015 of seven Fifa officials, allegedly connected to $150m (£114m) in kickbacks, paid on TV deals stretching from Latin America to the Caribbean. The US indicted 14 individuals.

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/D1j90jrUYAATOcR.jpg>

33) In June of 2016, Steele flew to Rome to meet with the FBI agent he'd worked with on FIFA. (Lisa Page testified before Congress that Gaeta was "Steele's handler".) Gaeta and Steele later met in London.

https://www.theepochtimes.com/how-a-little-known-fbi-unit-helped-to-disseminate-the-steele-dossier_2638330.html

"In June, Steele flew to Rome to brief the FBI contact with whom he had cooperated over FIFA," The Guardian reported. "His information started to reach the bureau in Washington."

It's not entirely clear if Steele met with the head of the Eurasian division, Gaeta, or another FBI agent. Either way, Steele met with Gaeta shortly thereafter in London.

The purpose of the London visit was clear. Steele was personally handing the first memo in his dossier to Gaeta for ultimate transmission back to the FBI and the State Department.

<https://pbs.twimg.com/media/D1j-pAxVAAurtA.png>

34) In September of 2016, Steele traveled again to Rome to meet with Gaeta and the Eurasian crime unit to brief them.

"In the middle of July, when he [Steele] was doing this other work and became concerned, he passed two to four pages of short points of what he was finding and our immediate reaction to that was, this is not in our purview. This needs to go to the FBI if there is any concern here that one candidate or the election as a whole might be influenced by the Russian Federation. That's something for the FBI to investigate."

In September 2016, Steele would travel back to Rome to meet with the FBI Eurasian squad once again. It's likely that the meeting contained several other FBI officials as well:

"In September, Steele went back to Rome. There, he met with an FBI team. Their response was one of 'shock and horror,' Steele said," according to The Guardian. "The bureau asked him to explain how he had compiled his reports, and to give background on his sources. It asked him to send future copies."

https://pbs.twimg.com/media/D1j_hXwVYAEtnyD.png

35) According to this article, Steele also met with Gaeta in Rome on July 5th of 2016, a trip that was cleared by the State Department's Victoria Nuland.

<https://www.breitbart.com/politics/2018/03/14/book-kerry-state-dept-official-victoria-nuland-greenlighted-trump...>

Steele sought out Rome-based FBI Special Agent Michael Gaeta, with whom he had worked on a previous case. Before Gaeta met with Steele on July 5, 2016, the book relates that the FBI first secured the support of Nuland, who at the time was assistant Secretary of State for European and Eurasian Affairs specializing in Russia. Nuland currently serves as chief executive officer at the Center for a New American Security.

Regarding the arrangements for Steele's initial meeting with the FBI about the dossier claims, Isikoff and Corn report:

There were a few hoops Gaeta had to jump through. He was assigned to the U.S. embassy in Rome. The FBI checked with Victoria Nuland's office at the State Department : Do you support this meeting ? Nuland, having found Steele's reports on Ukraine to have been generally credible, gave the green light.

Within a few days, on July 5, Gaeta arrived and headed to Steele's office near Victoria station . Steele handed him a copy of the report. Gaeta, a seasoned FBI agent, started to read . He turned white. For a while, Gaeta said nothing . Then he remarked, "I have to report this to headquarters."

The book documents that Nuland previously received Steele's reports on the Ukrainian crisis and had been familiar with Steele's general work.

"Normally, intelligence passed on from a member of the "Five Eyes" alliance -- Australia, Canada, New Zealand, the U.K., and the U.S. -- to another member comes through an official channel for intelligence sharing.
